

From: Anniken Williams, Public Policy Polling

To: Interested Parties

Subject: Democrat Jason Crow Leads Incumbent Republican Congressman Mike Coffman By 5 Points

Date: February 21, 2018

A new Public Policy Polling survey finds that Democratic candidate Jason Crow has a lead over incumbent Republican Congressman Mike Coffman in the 2018 election for Colorado's 6th Congressional District. In the initial ballot, Crow leads Coffman 44-39. After learning that Crow does not take money from corporate special interest PACs while Coffman has accepted $1.6 million from corporate PACs and just voted to give corporations a huge tax cut, voters support Crow 48-38 over Coffman.

It is no surprise that Democrat Jason Crow's lead grew from 5 points to 10 points seeing as a large majority of voters believe that special interest money in elections is a problem and would be more likely to vote for a candidate who does not take this kind of money. 62% say they are more likely to support a candidate who has pledged to not take any money from corporate special interests, and only 10% say they are less likely to support a candidate like this. A significant majority also believe that special interest money in elections is a major (61%) or minor (20%) problem.

Trump is highly unpopular in Colorado's 6th Congressional District with only 39% approving of his job performance and a majority (57%) disapproving.

PPP surveyed 751 CO CD 6 voters from February 15-18, 2018. The margin of error is +/- 3.6%. This poll was conducted by automated telephone interviews.

