Methodology

Greenberg Quinlan Rosner Research conducted a phone survey of 1,000 2018 general election voters in a national battleground of Congressional Districts on November 8-12, 2018.

The data are subject to a margin of error of +/- 3.1 percentage points at the 95 percent confidence interval; margin of error is higher among subgroups.

Ending the culture of corruption in Washington finds intense support among voters

Now, I am going to read you a list of issues, after I read each one please tell me how important that issue was when you decided how to vote: very important, somewhat important, not very important, or not at all important?

Top 5 Issues

Very important

Ending the culture of corruption in Washington

75

Protecting Social Security and Medicare

71

Growing the economy and creating jobs

70

Bringing the right kind of change to Washington

70

Making healthcare affordable and reducing Rx costs

67

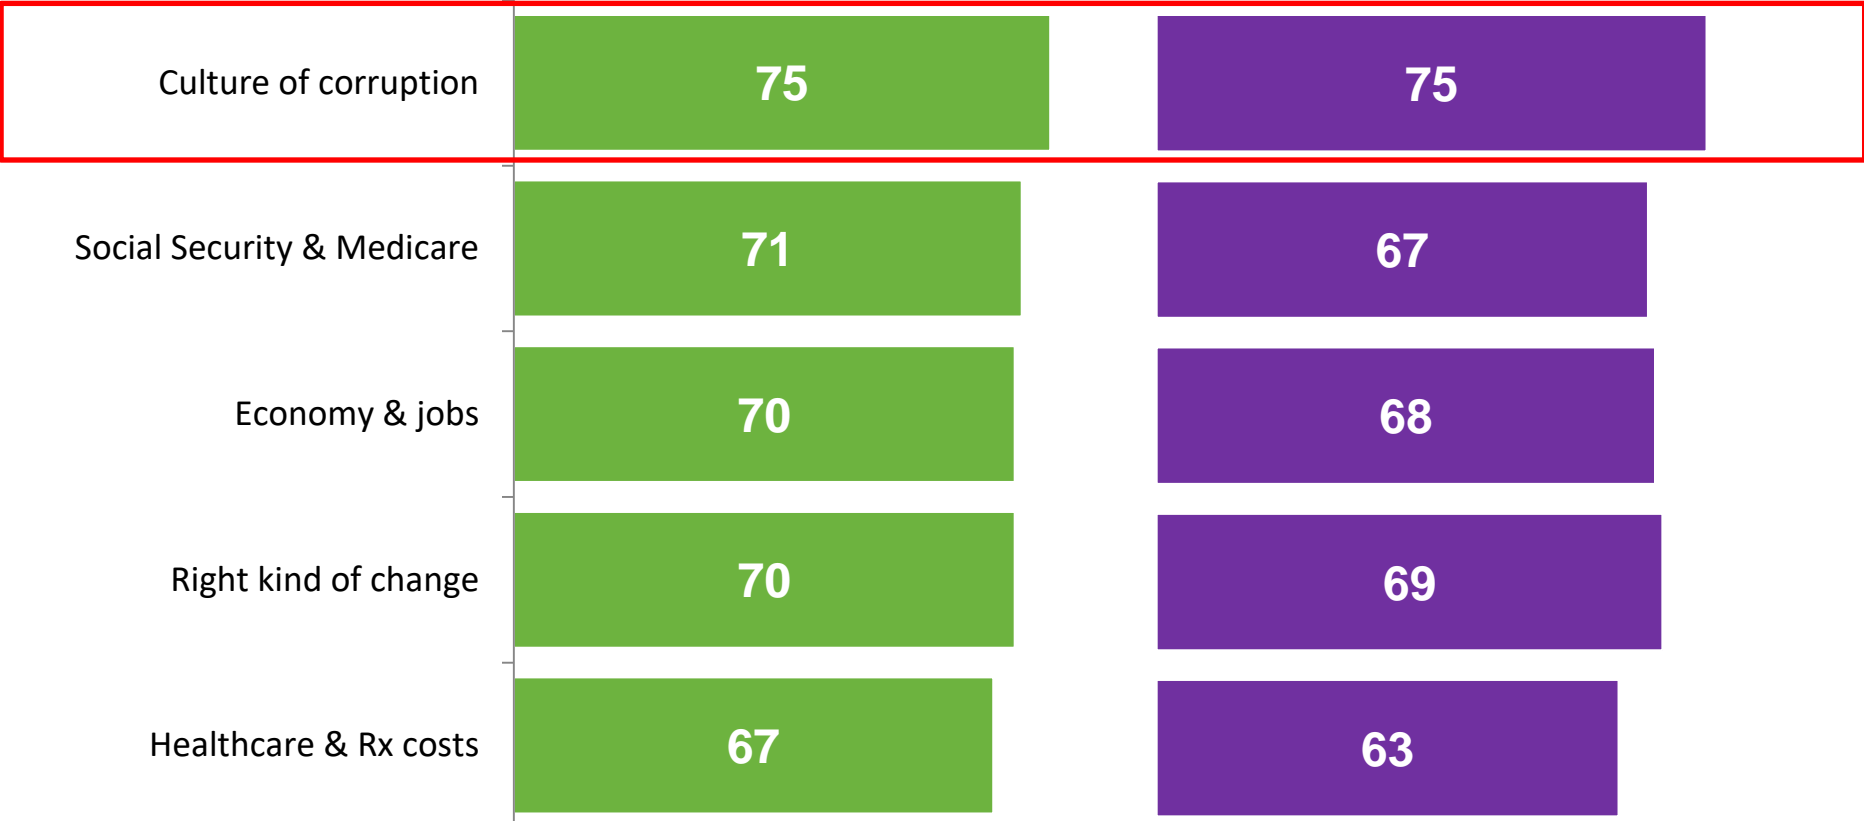

Larger gap in importance between corruption and other issues among independents

Top 5 Issues

TOTAL

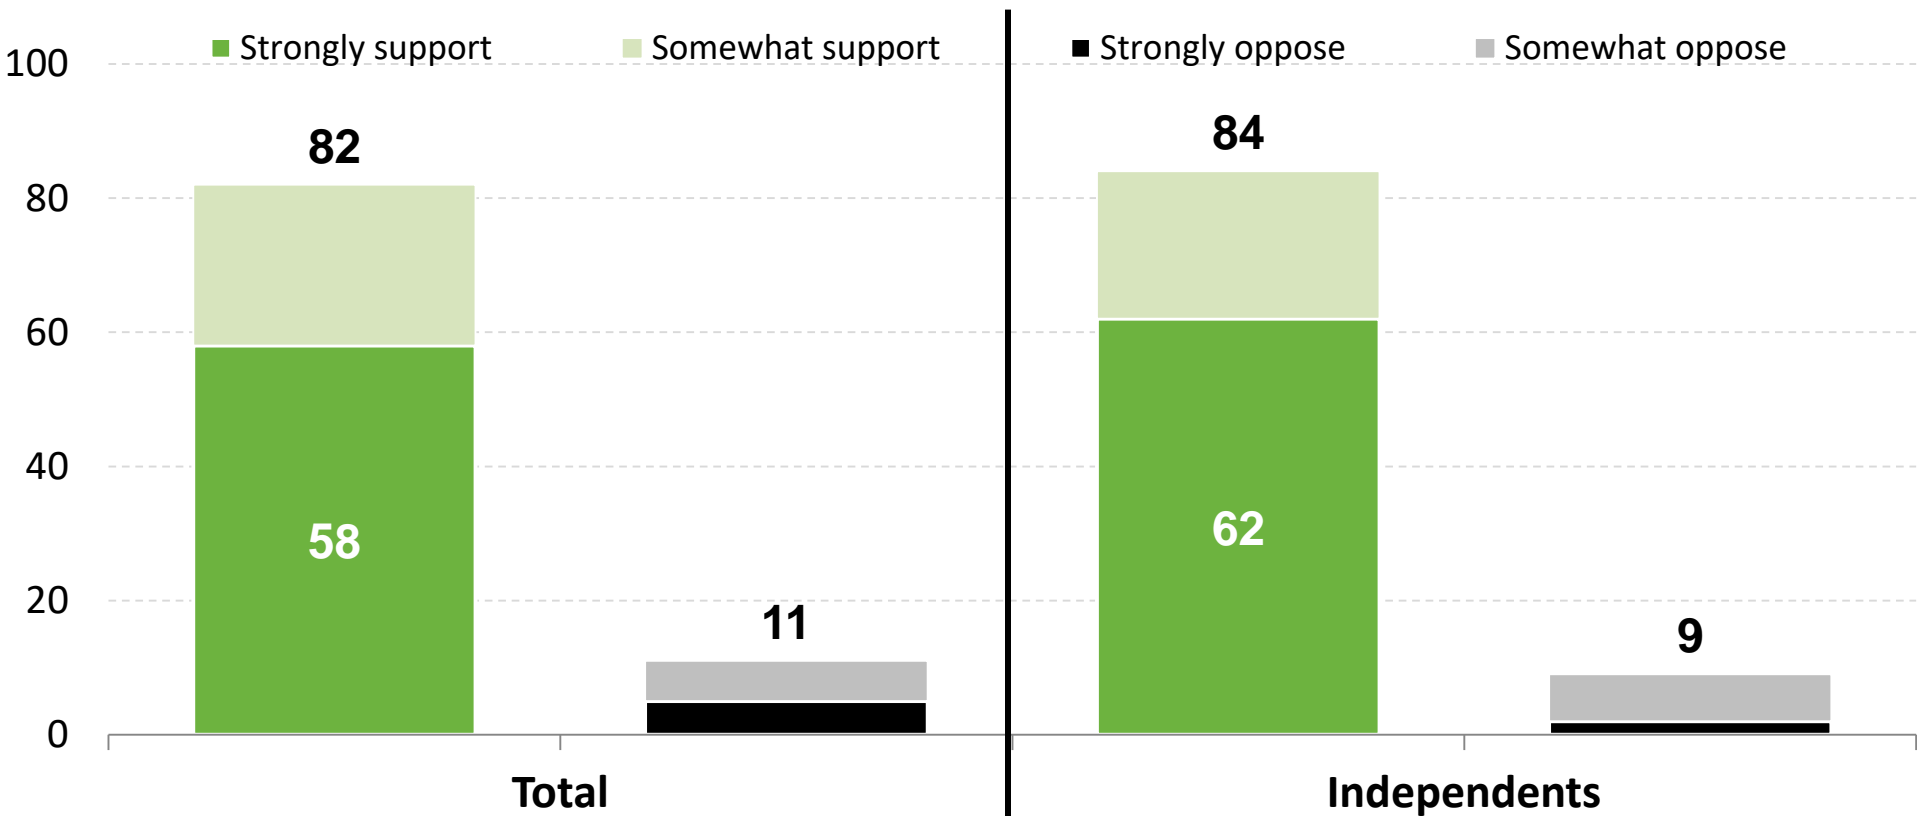

INDEPENDENTS

Very important ONLY

An overwhelming majority support reform legislation, more intensity among independents

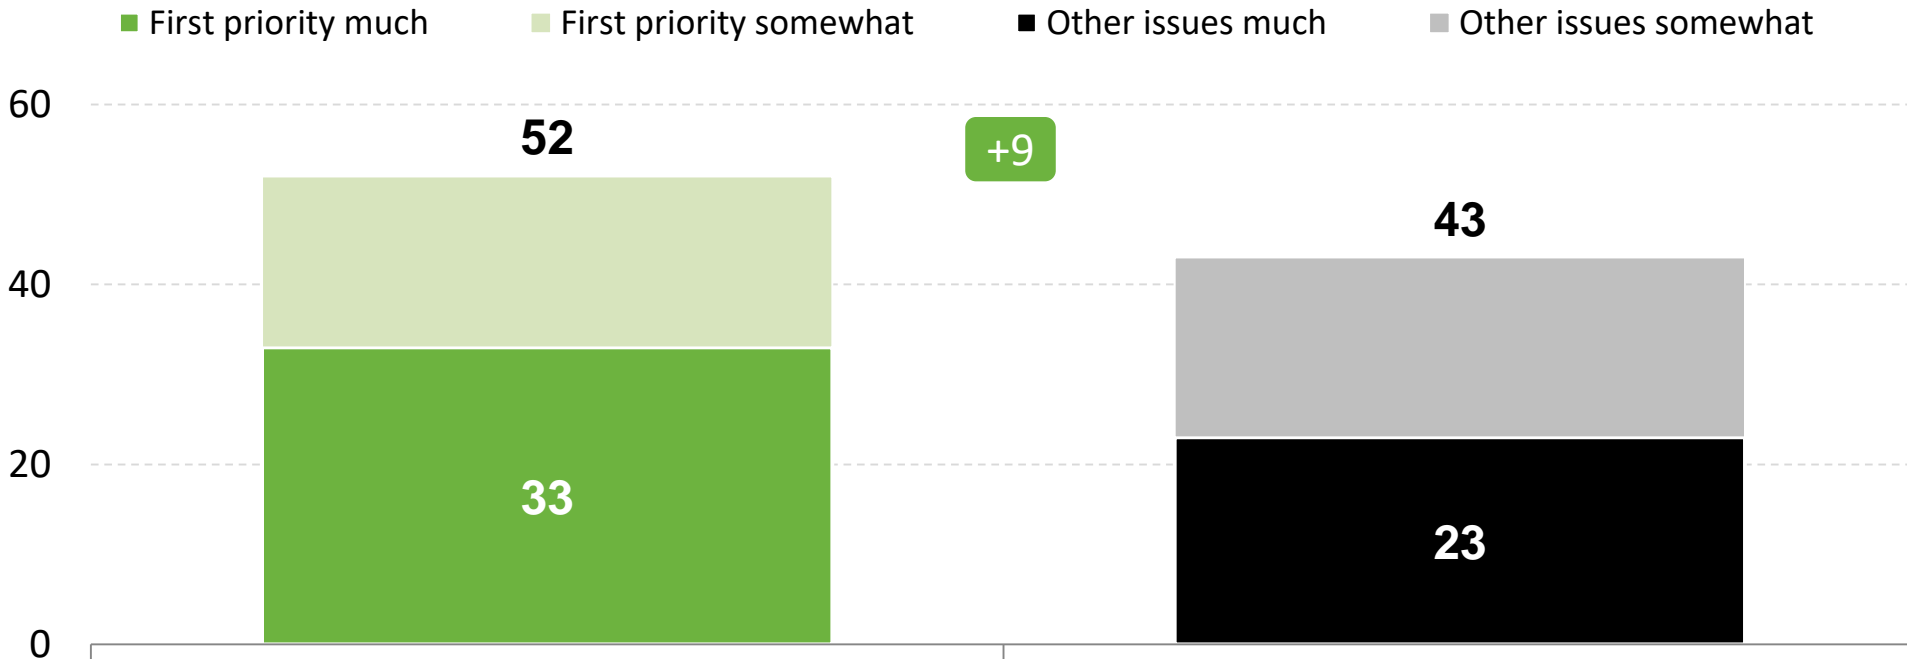

Some people propose that the first action of the next Congress should be legislation to stop corruption with tougher ethics rules, ensuring the protection of voting rights, and cracking down on special interest money in politics to help make Washington work for the people again. Do you support or oppose this idea?

A majority of 2018 voters support getting money out of politics...even before addressing other issues

(FIRST PRIORITY) Some people say that cracking down on corruption and getting big money out of politics should be the first priority because it affects everything—the cost of health care, prescription drugs, and many other things. Nothing will change until politicians stop being bought and sold by big money.

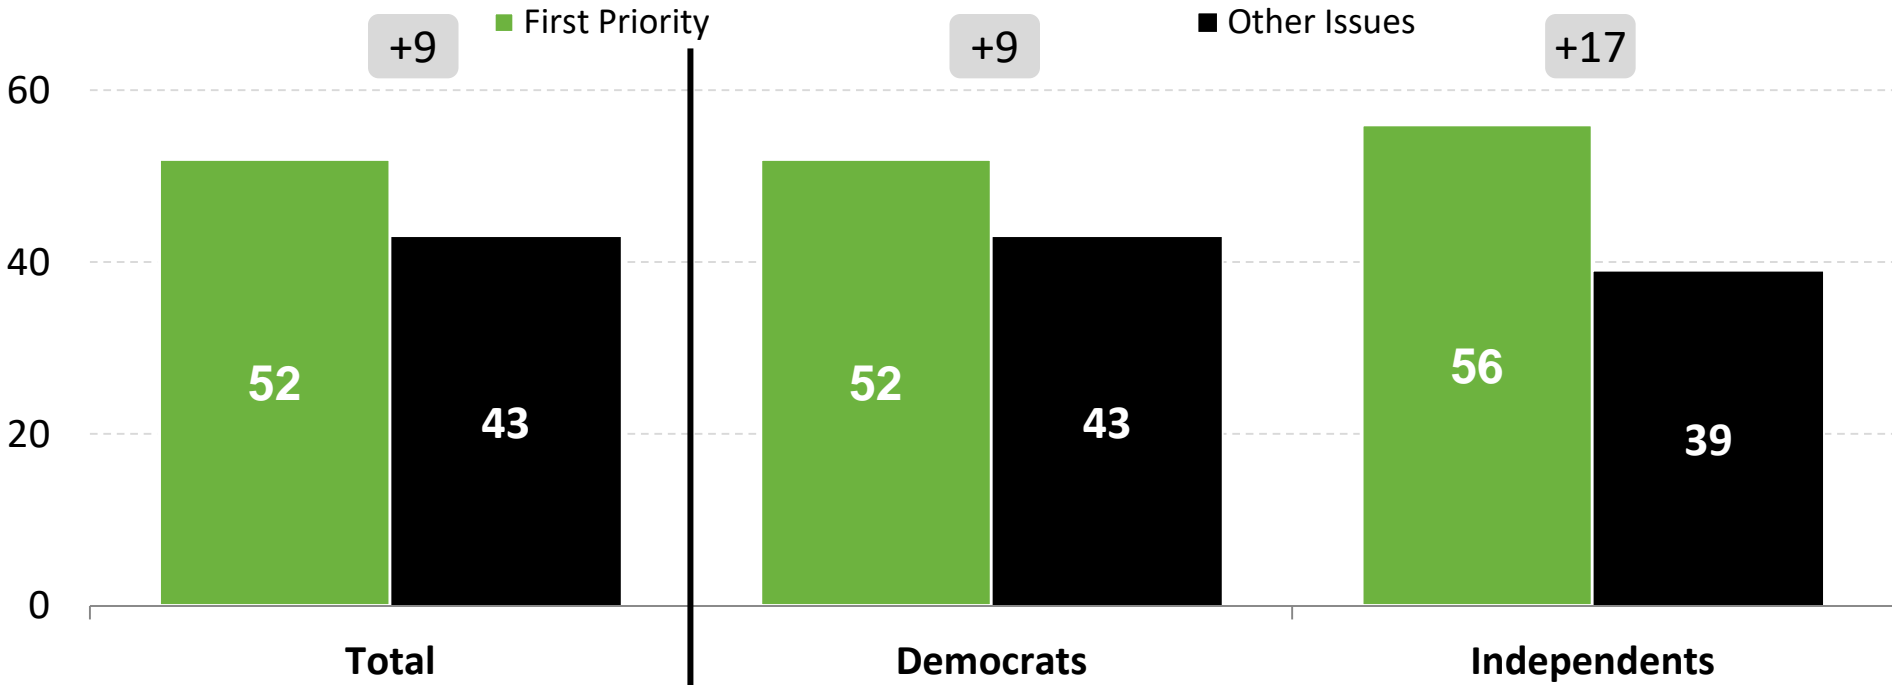

(OTHER ISSUES) Other people say that cracking down on corruption and getting big money out of politics is important, but there are more important issues that need to be tackled first. Instead we should start by addressing issues like healthcare, prescription drugs, and the economy, and then tackle corruption and getting big money out of politics.

Dems believe getting money out of politics should be first priority, even stronger response among inds
